Google, FB won't have to pay domestic tax under new rules

Appointment of grievance officer does not imply permanent establishment, say officials

SHRIMI CHOUDHARY
New Delhi, 7 July

For digital multinationals such as Google, Facebook and Twitter, appointing grievance officers under new information technology (IT) rules does not imply that they have a “permanent establishment” in India.

But if their local office performs business functions and contributes to revenue of the parent firm abroad, it may attract domestic taxes, said two people in the revenue department.

This has come in the wake of foreign tech companies and others seeking legal advice on the tax implications of the government's new IT order. They are required to appoint chief compliance officer, nodal officer and grievance officer from India. These firms fear that such appointments may attract income tax anywhere between 25 per cent and 40 per cent.

“Creating any physical presence in the form of a grievance officer or a nodal officer, that too in compliance to government directions, will not create any business connection or permanent establishment,” said one of the two people cited above.

Despite having local offices in the country, their entire income does not come under the tax net due to different tax structures under which they operate.

However, they pay an equalisation levy of 6 per cent on their advertising revenue and digital transactions.

CLEARING THE AIR

- From a tax perspective, nodal officer recognised as an auxiliary post
- Appointment being made to respond to government/regulators
- Such appointments do not imply permanent establishment or business connection
- Tax implications arise when local office of a foreign firm performs business
- Further, revenue generation by local office for parent firm also attracts tax liabilities

“Any such appointments are recognised as ‘auxiliary duties’ in tax terms where appointments are made for regulatory purposes. It has nothing to do with the core business of a company unless it is doing any income earning functions. So, in that case, it can't be considered a permanent establishment,” said a senior revenue official.

However, if they are setting up an office with staff and operating fully, then a risk of taxation arises, he added.

From a domestic law perspective, permanent establishment is defined under Indian Income Tax Act as a fixed place of business where the business of the enterprise is wholly or partly carried on that indicates business connection between the foreign parent and Indian company.

Another official said the tax department works strictly in accordance with the Income-tax Act and global standard international taxation and transfer pricing rules.

The appointment of a nodal officer, according to the Information Technology Act, is an issue under a different Act. And if it affects the taxation of these multinational corporations (MNCs), it would depend on the individual case facts, he said.

The international taxation rules, particularly with respect to permanent establishments, have been the critical area for multinationals as the rules usually call for taxing the profit in countries where they create value.

However, there have been significant changes seen due to base erosion and profit shifting type measures of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), which gets support from countries globally, including India.

Earlier this week, G7 finance ministers had agreed to a global minimum corporate tax rate of 15 per cent and taxation of profits based on country of sales — aligned with the OECD workplan.

India's new IT rules, which came into effect in mid-May, intend to regulate content on social media platforms. The rules make them more accountable to legal requests for removal of posts and sharing details on the originators of messages. The issue aggravated when the government slammed Twitter for not complying with the rules.

The Centre said Twitter has lost immunity as it has failed to abide by the law.

Upgrad readies $250-mn war chest for acquisitions

PRESSTrust OF INDIA
Mumbai, 7 July

To drive faster growth through the inorganic route, Temasek and IFC-backed online up-skilling and re-skilling platform Upgrad — which has more than doubled its customer base after the outbreak — has created a $250-million war chest for acquisitions, which it hopes to conclude over the next three quarters.

The largest higher online education platform in South Asia is banking on non-linear strategy to drive growth and also to consolidate leadership in global higher education space as it plans to enter southeast Asia, the company said on Wednesday.

“We have earmarked $250 million for M&As over the next 7-9 months,” Upgrad said in a statement quoting founder chairman Ronnie Screwvala, adding that the first two such deals would be

Screwvala had earlier said he had set a target of doubling the revenue run rate to over ₹2,400 crore this year announced over the next couple of months.

Recently, Screwvala had told PTI that he had set a target of doubling the revenue run rate to over ₹2,400 crore this financial year from ₹1,200 crore in the previous one, which itself was a multifold jump from the year prior, when it stood at only ₹230 crore.

With aggressive growth, the five-year-old company, which joined the edtech bandwagon only in 2015, aims to capture close to 70 per cent of the online higher education market for working professionals.

“We continue to build a very strong, integrated, connected model in online higher education across multiple geographies. We see a very strong value currency in our stock to look to merge/acquire companies with exceptional founders who will join us as fellow entrepreneurs to build this out over the next decade,” Screwvala explained his non-linear growth strategy.

He said Upgrad has already identified specific segments as well as target companies — one from platform and high touch digital learning experience side and the other from the immersive short form learning — will be announced over the next 60 days.
